

Last Memory

How we wish to go back to the past
Before this virus spread through the world so fast
Things have changed since it started
To six feet apart at all times,
There is no denying it,
The death toll rises.
And the hope we once had, dies.
How I wish we could have been with you,
Before this virus took you.
You planted a seed in each of our hearts
But has been drowned in pain since your last breath.
We'll never know when our time together,
Just might be our last.
Until it just becomes,
A memory from the past
But now it's time set aside our differences,
And come together
All for the better.

This poem is dedicated to one of my loved ones who has passed away due to SARS Covid-19, please stay safe
